What is Census 2010?

The U.S. Constitution requires a census every ten years. Census 2010 will count every person regardless of age, race, ethnic group, and citizenship who resides in the United States including the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and American Samoa, Census 2010 caters to our country's diverse population---Questionnaires will be translated into Spanish, Chinese (Simplified), Korean, Vietnamese, and Russian. There will be language guides in 59 languages available on request. Census 2010 will create hundreds of thousands of temporary jobs across the nation.

Why Census 2010?

Each year, more than $300 billion in federal funds are awarded to States and communities based on Census data. Over a 10-year-period, this is more than $3 trillion dollars. The data collected will guide planning for new hospitals, schools, roads senior centers, child care facilities, and other important services.

All census workers undergo an FBI background check. This year the fingerprinting requirement has been added for the first time for the 2010 Census as an extra precaution. Census 2010 officials say they are confident that these measures will make the 2010 Census the safest decennial census possible.

How to Recognize a Census Worker:

- Ask to see their ID. The census worker will have a government issued ID marked with just their name.
- The census worker will not ask to be let inside your home.
- Make sure the census questionnaire and census worker do not ask for financial information or social security number.

If the census worker or questionnaire do not meet these criteria, do not fill out the census. If you are wary of the census worker or have questions, contact your Regional Census Center: http://2010.census.gov/2010census/contact/index.php or 1-800-923-8282.
